CIPS Webcast: 'Technocreep: The Surrender of Privacy and the Capitalization of Intimacy' (Member-Only Content)

CIPS

Recorded at the May 2015 CIPS Ontario Event: "Technocreep: The Surrender of Privacy and the Capitalization of Intimacy"

Presented by: Tom Keenan, FCIPS, I.S.P., ITCP, Author of Technocreep: The Surrender of Privacy and the Capitalization of Intimacy

Precedent needed to be sure private messages stay private

IT World Canada

Email and texting may seem private, but we need some legal precedents to be sure. BBC news is reporting that European employers can read employees' private messages at work. The argument is that in this case there was a company policy that workers were not to use the internet for anything but work. Thankfully that is no longer very common in the Canadian workplace.
